In order to combine teaching and evaluation, it is important for teachers to view evaluation as a way to encourage autonomous learning for each student. Moreover, while emphasizing this approach, teachers should reflect on students' learning outcomes in class in accordance with their teaching objectives and make use of these outcomes for improving both the students' learning and their own teaching. Repeated use of this process is important.

(解答例)

I'd have students make a presentation about a place they'd want to go. Firstly, I'd have them research the place using the Internet. Secondly, students would prepare a note about what to say. In this stage, I'd teach them a model structure of a presentation and tell them to include two reasons why they want to go there. Thirdly, I'd have them make pairs and have them practice making their presentation to each other. Students could give some advice to their partner and have time to check their presentation by themselves. Lastly, students would make their presentation to the class.
